The Love of Hate

Perspectives on anti-Asian aggression

Public Relations Committee

Harassment and violence against Asians in the US is neither recent nor an aberration caused by the previous administration. Some familiarization might be in order:

- Asians are rendered 'invisible' because the history of Asians in America doesn't fit a simple racialized narrative. This op-ed by Michael Eric Dyson is an example of someone grappling with that complexity from a non-Asian viewpoint.
- In an interview in The New Yorker Renee Tajima-Peña, the director of the documentary "Who Killed Vincent Chin", touches on decades of racialized and sexualized myth-education about what Asians represent to America.
- Chinese were the first foreign nationals to be banned by the US, but not the last. Asians have been 'perpetual foreigners' in the US for over 150 years. The PBS series 'Asian Americans' details fights for rights by Asians in America, and how Asian stereotypes have historically resulted in inattention at best.
- Popular notice of anti-Asian crimes and coalition-building by Asian Americans seems to ebb and flow like a tide across decades. This interview with poet Cathy Park Hong is like searching the sea with a contemplative gaze.

Regardless, there are ways to act when people are being attacked:

- Aid the harassed. Sign up for bystander intervention sessions with iHollaback.
- Report crimes of hate or aggression. The New York State Attorney General has a special hotline for Coronavirus-hate crimes. Particularly if you are an Asian American, document the incident at Stop AAPI Hate.

Housing discrimination is one of the bedrocks of inequality in our nation. Homeownership is a stepping stone to financial freedom and the foundation of generational wealth that black and brown people have been purposefully excluded from receiving.

The history of inequality has left black and brown families that do not understand homeownership's power to feel it is an unattainable direction to explore.

I am honored to have worked for the past 20 years to improve minority access to homeownership through education and unbiased guidance.

I joined to support P-CoC because I believe in the importance of equity and understand that equity can be accomplished when we focus on empowering our children and families first.

P-CoC is a group laser-focused on racial equity for persons of color, supporting ethnicity, cultural expression, fair treatment, and education for all.
