

“What is life? It is the flash of a firefly in the night. It is the breath of a buffalo in the wintertime. It is the little shadow which runs across the grass and loses itself in the sunset.” – Crowfoot, Blackfoot warrior and orator

Native American Heritage Month (November)

The indigenous population of the Americas (North, South, Central) likely stems from multiple migrations during and after the last Ice Age. By 1492 the total population is estimated to have been 50 to 100 million. As of 2021 the 'American Indian and Alaska Native' population in the U.S. is estimated at 6.9 million.

First Nations peoples practiced many different lifestyles in agricultural as well as hunter/gatherer societies. The color map above outlines major territorial ranges.

Notable Native Americans include:

- Geronimo (1829-1909) Leader of the Chiricahua Apache tribe who led the resistance against invaders from Mexico and the U.S. He spent the last decades of his life as a prisoner of war, unable to return to his homeland.
- Pocahontas (c.1595-1617) Of the Pamunkey and born to the chief of the Powhatan, 'Pocahontas' was her nickname. She was spunky and playful, clever and resourceful, necessary traits to survive kidnapping and expatriation.
- Dr. Charles Eastman (1858–1939) Of Santee Dakota, English, and French ancestry, he graduated from Dartmouth and received his MD from Boston University. He was an activist who helped found the Boy Scouts of America.
- Maria Tallchief (1925–2013) A Prima Ballerina with the NY City Ballet, her father was Osage. After retiring from dancing, she and her sister opened the Chicago City Ballet.
- Sequoya (1767-1843) A Cherokee whose creation of a written syllabary improved literacy among his people, helping preserve the language.
- Deb Haaland (1960-) A member of the Pueblo of Laguna, she is one of the first Native American women elected to the U.S. Congress, and currently serves as Secretary of the Interior.
